

Abrams Fensterman Partner Maureen Bass Represents Plaintiffs in GPS Tracking Lawsuits Against Town of Greece

Abrams Fensterman Partner-in-Charge, Maureen Bass, represents two families in federal lawsuits against the Town of Greece, alleging that officials used warrantless GPS trackers and other intimidation tactics to silence citizens. This case, which has garnered significant news coverage, raises critical concerns about government overreach and abuse of power.

One of the lawsuits centers on the actions taken by the Town of Greece to silence our client and the impact those actions have had on our client's family. The second lawsuit claims similar surveillance tactics were used against them due to the plaintiff's involvement as a witness in a criminal case against a former town official. The lawsuits raise significant concerns about privacy rights and government overreach, with both cases pending in U.S. District Court.

The cases have been featured in various radio, TV and print outlets, including the following:

Greece police officer terminated following misconduct and insubordination probe (WHAM)

Greece fires officer who accused town of surveilling his family (WROC)

Lawsuits accuse Greece officials of using tracking devices (The Daily Record)

News 8 interviews vocal Greece resident who is suing the town for tracking him (News 8)

Lawsuit alleges tracking and surveillance of vocal town of Greece resident (RochesterFirst)

Second lawsuit accuses Greece of tracking family (RochesterFirst)

Town of Greece faces lawsuit over alleged vehicle tracking (WHAM)

Bob Lonsberry | iHeart