News12's Power & Politics interviewed Abrams Fensterman Attorney, David Imamura, in connection with last week's redistricting case.

Last Wednesday, the New York State Court of Appeals heard arguments concerning the potential redrawing of the state's congressional districts. This case holds significant national implications, particularly for the control of the U.S. House of Representatives in the 2024 elections. Currently, New York's district lines are a crucial factor, especially in light of the Republicans' narrow majority in the House, partly due to their gains in New York in the 2022 elections.
